Data Collection - the NLR permits advertisers to collect user-provided personal information (for example, through Web forms embedded in ads). Advertisers wishing to collect personal information within advertisements must follow these basic guidelines: 1. Clearly identify organization; 2. Provide link to privacy policy; 3. Identify the purpose for collecting information.

Creative Business Requirements - the NLR has certain standards and guidelines for ads featured on the NLR Web site, blog and enewsletters to complement the NLR brand and home page. The NLR reserves the right to reject any ad that it feels does not meet its minimum requirements.

Ads Should:

- Contain a clear message, offer, or promotion
- Have a highly professional and businesslike design
• Contain imagery relevant to the offer or promotion
• Have consistent branding (use of similar/same logos and messaging)
• Link only to landing pages that provide content relevant to the ad featured
• Link to an offer or information that is not more than two clicks away

Ads May Not:

• Be misleading in any way (specifically within creative messaging/offers/promotions, etc.)
• Include inappropriate graphics (e.g., overly graphic medical conditions, images of distressed animals or humans), or suggestive or explicit images (e.g., models wearing swimsuits or undergarments)
• Be designed to rapidly flash images or use multiple flashing images
• Be overly cluttered or be unclear or contain inconsistent messaging
• Include a fake link or fake HTML
