On June 6, 2020, Massachusetts Governor Charlie Baker announced the state would start phase 2 of its reopening plan on June 8. This is the second of four phases in the reopening plan. Phase 1 began on May 18. Phase 2 allows the following businesses to reopen on June 8, subject to certain restrictions:

- Flight schools
- Beer gardens / breweries / wineries / distilleries (if providing seated food service under retail food permits issued by municipal authorities)

All reopening businesses must comply with the state’s mandatory safety standards. In addition, they must follow sector-specific mandatory safety standards and recommended best practices.

As many employers continue to reimagine their workplaces, they should begin to develop their return to work plans using the tools on the Reopening Massachusetts webpage. Implementing these new standards will require a strong working knowledge of many aspects of an employer’s operations, as well as the new health and safety protocols. Larger employers should consider forming a multidisciplinary team to adopt these measures and develop an employee communication program.

In addition, as a condition of reopening, employers must provide training for employees regarding safety measures, including social distancing and hygiene protocols.

Reopening orders contain extensive requirements creating compliance issues that can vary significantly depending on the specific state or local jurisdiction. Jackson Lewis attorneys are closely monitoring updates and changes to legal requirements and guidance and are available to help employers weed through the complexities involved with state-specific or multistate-compliant plans.
